 or at Audreys and Greenwoods
 Time: 7:00 p.m. Cost: $25.00/person Featured
Speaker: Andrew Nikiforuk; Respondent: Imre Szeman - Moderator: Paula Simons

In Alberta today there is a need for public discourse that considers hydrocarbons and oil wealth on the one hand, and public literacy and political engagement on the other. How do other oil-rich states manage their resources to ensure that all citizens remain healthy, well-educated, and literate? □□What is the relationship between provincial & national material wealth and the literacy rate? Is there a correlation between literacy and political engagement? Can the priorities of a resource economy ever eliminate illiteracy or create conditions by which the rate of literacy and political participation would improve?

Aboriginal Skills and Training Strategic Investment Fund
 New In Canada's Economic Action Plan

Through Canada's Economic Action Plan, the federal government is investing $75 million of new funding over two years to establish the Aboriginal Skills and Training Strategic Investment Fund (ASTSIF). The fund will support short-term, focused initiatives designed to help Aboriginal people get the specific skills they require to benefit from economic opportunities.

Economic Action Plan – Support for Workers and the Unemployed
 New In Canada's Economic Action Plan
 Launched in July 2009

As part of Canada's Economic Action Plan, the federal government made a commitment to encourage skilled trades and apprenticeships by investing $40 million per year in a new Apprenticeship Completion Grant (ACG), which complements the existing Apprenticeship Incentive Grant.

Whose Responsibility? Employers' Views on Developing Their Workers' Literacy, Numeracy and Employability Skills. By Ray Townsend & Peter Waterhouse. 2008
Note: You must register to access these reports.
Registration is free.

This study shows how a group of employers understand the provision of literacy, numeracy and employability skills and the continuing development of these skills in their workplaces. It demonstrates that some employers accept that it is both necessary and the employer's responsibility to provide learning and development opportunities for these skills. However, employers are looking for support in doing this.

Skills to Live By – Participants Reflections on the Value of Sectoral Training Experience. By Maureen Conway & Amy Blair 2006. Workforce Strategies Initiative	In this work, a series of focus groups and individual interviews with people who had participated in sectoral training programs four years previously was conducted. The former trainees reflected on what elements of the training had helped them most in their career, what they perceived as facilitating further advancement, and what were continued challenges.
Anticipating Population Ageing – Challenges and Responses by Peter Whiteford. Social Policy Division, OECD	Slides indicate: What is the OECD and what does it do? Anticipating the challenges of population change; How does US compare with other countries? Possible responses. Statistics are cited.
Aging and Employment Policy Canada. OECD Publishing 2005	The OECD has reported extensively on public pension and early retirement systems and the need for reforms of these systems to cope with some of the challenges posed by population ageing. However, these reforms will not be enough to encourage later retirement and to reduce the risk of future labour shortages.

Temporary Foreign Workers in Alberta's Oil sector. Working Paper No 54 by Katherine de Guerre University of Sussex. February 2009	Through a case study analysis of TFWs in Alberta's oil sector, this paper will examine the growth of temporary foreign worker programs (TFWPs) in Alberta. The objective of the paper is to explore the interests, perspectives, and actions of employers, governments, and unions in regard to Alberta's TFWP.
Creating Opportunities for Temporary Foreign Workers and Their Communities: Innovation in Capacity-Building and Skills Transfer in Latin America. FOCAL PROJECT REPORT: Labour Mobility and Development. Brandon, Manitoba. February 2010	Brandon was selected as a locale to conduct consultations because a large number of TFWs from Latin America are hired to work in the meat-packing industry, primarily by Maple Leaf. The report examines new ways of providing skills upgrading and transfer opportunities, as well as training that can support economic development in Latino migrant sending communities.
Inclusion Improves Workforce Productivity and Engagement, But Success Isn't Measured. July 2010. By the Institute for Corporate Productivity (i4cp)	A majority of companies have employee inclusion strategies in place to engage with ever-diversifying workforces, but many have yet to figure out a way to measure the success of such programs, according to the latest study released today by i4cp. The study found that inclusion strategies support talent acquisition and retention efforts as well as increase the productivity and engagement of current employees.
Ethnic diversity to shape our new identity. March 2010. By Shannon Proudfoot, Canwest News Service	By 2031, at least one in four people in Canada will have been born elsewhere. A report from Statistics Canada this week projected unprecedented population shifts over the next two decades and sparked a wave of vitriolic online comments, yet experts say there's widespread reluctance to admit there are problems here.
